

ABSTRACT

A gas turbine engine has a rotor stack carried by a central shaft. A number of retainer segments each have a first surface engaging the rotor stack and a second surface engaging the central shaft so as to transmit a precompression force from the central shaft to the rotor stack.